

ICHANKA

FAMATINA VALLEY, LA RIOJA ARGENTINA

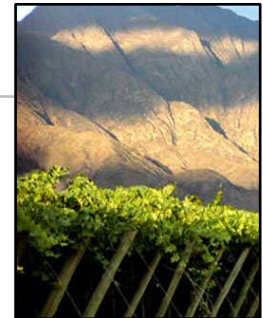

ICHANKA TRANSLATES AS "WATER OF THE CONDOR"

("I" = water). The little hamlet of Ichanka, located on the Estate, was an important source of spring water to the indigenous Diaguitas. This secret water source was discovered courtesy of the Condors that would be seen hovering over the spring. The Diaguitas believed the Condor was the closest creature to divinity and was considered a messenger of the spirits.

Valle de la Puerta was established in 1994 and is located in the Famatina Valley, approximately 754 miles North from Buenos Aires by road.

^{West} The property sits between the Famatina and Velasco mountain ranges, which branch off the impressive Andes. This unique valley offers a magnificent visual backdrop and provides well-drained topsoil.

LOCATION

Valle de Famatina,
La Rioja province, Argentina
Latitude: 29°24'27.33"S
Longitude: 67°29'45.10"W

SOIL & ALTITUDE

Deep sandy-clay soil of alluvial origin
Altitude: 1.000 m.
2.380 feet above sea level.

CLIMATE

Warm and semi-arid. Temperature difference between day and night
may reach 68°F | 20°C.
Rainfall ranges 4-8 inches
100-200mm per year

